					All blocks (list entries)	250	134	112	496
					Unique persons				395

Notes: R = rulers, S = scholars, W = warriors. Cells count list entries: a person is counted under the block of the list in which he or she appears, and a person listed in two or three role files (e.g. a ruler who was also a warrior) is counted once per role; 91 persons appear in more than one list (Table 6), so the 496 entries correspond to 395 unique persons (Table 7). The 74 Rashidun-era entries are listed separately in Table 5.

Notes: Persons are grouped by the polity (or lineage) block of the config file in which they appear; the running number is the row index within this table. Bracketed italics give a non-strong affiliation, secondary blocks, and cross-listings in the other role tables. Era marks after a name: † = ruled or was active into the colonial period; ‡ = born before the colonial conquest but active mainly under colonial rule; § = colonial/modern figure kept only to flag a homonym. Sources: ALA II / ALA IV = Hunwick et al., Arabic Literature of Africa, vols. II and IV; Saad = Saad (1983), Social History of Timbuktu, appendix; Marty = Marty (1920–21), Études sur l'Islam (vols. 1–4); chapter numbers are the chapters cited when the list was compiled, page numbers are printed pages on which the person's name was found by text search of the scanned volumes (at most 6 shown); Data = name attested as a mosque name in `mosques.csv`; Web = general reference with URL listed in Table 8.

Notes: Persons are grouped by the polity (or lineage) block of the config file in which they appear; the running number is the row index within this table. Bracketed italics give a non-strong affiliation, secondary blocks, and cross-listings in the other role tables. Era marks after a name: † = ruled or was active into the colonial period; ‡ = born before the colonial conquest but active mainly under colonial rule; § = colonial/modern figure kept only to flag a homonym. Sources: ALA II / ALA IV = Hunwick et al., Arabic Literature of Africa, vols. II and IV; Saad = Saad (1983), Social History of Timbuktu, appendix; Marty = Marty (1920–21), Études sur l'Islam (vols. 1–4); chapter numbers are the chapters cited when the list was compiled, page numbers are printed pages on which the person's name was found by text search of the scanned volumes (at most 6 shown); Data = name attested as a mosque name in `mosques.csv`; Web = general reference with URL listed in Table 8.

Notes: Persons are grouped by the polity (or lineage) block of the config file in which they appear; the running number is the row index within this table. Bracketed italics give a non-strong affiliation, secondary blocks, and cross-listings in the other role tables. Era marks after a name: † = ruled or was active into the colonial period; ‡ = born before the colonial conquest but active mainly under colonial rule; § = colonial/modern figure kept only to flag a homonym. Sources: ALA II / ALA IV = Hunwick et al., Arabic Literature of Africa, vols. II and IV; Saad = Saad (1983), Social History of Timbuktu, appendix; Marty = Marty (1920–21), Études sur l'Islam (vols. 1–4); chapter numbers are the chapters cited when the list was compiled, page numbers are printed pages on which the person's name was found by text search of the scanned volumes (at most 6 shown); Data = name attested as a mosque name in `mosques.csv`; Web = general reference with URL listed in Table 8. Mosques: distinct entries of `mosques.csv` whose name contains a high-confidence keyword of the entry (output of `identify_precolonial.py`); exact = keyword found verbatim in the normalised name; fuzzy = token-window similarity ≥ 0.85, which includes the exact matches (similarity = 1), so fuzzy $\geq$ exact and the difference is the number of matches found only by the fuzzy pass, to be checked by hand; a blank cell is zero. 50 entries have at least one exactly matched mosque and 5 only fuzzy matches; together 433 mosques (exact) and 81 further mosques (fuzzy only) are attributed to an entry of this table (a mosque naming several entries, e.g. 'the Companions', is counted once per entry).

Notes: Entries of the three keyword lists are treated as the same person when they share a specific keyword and have compatible dates (91 persons appear in two or three lists, see Table 6); the name, polity block and period are those of the ruler entry (else scholar, else warrior), and a differing block of another entry is given in italics. Era marks: † = active into the colonial period; ‡ = born before the colonial conquest, active mainly under colonial rule; § = modern homonym flag. Mosques: distinct entries of `mosques.csv` whose name contains a high-confidence keyword of the person; low-confidence keys and Tier-2 names off); exact = keyword found verbatim in the normalised name; fuzzy = token-window similarity ≥ 0.85, which includes the exact matches (similarity = 1), so fuzzy $\geq$ exact and the difference is the number of matches found only by the fuzzy pass, to be checked by hand; a blank cell is zero. 30 persons have at least one exactly matched mosque and 16 only fuzzy matches; together 57 mosques (exact) and 35 further mosques (fuzzy only) are attributed to a person in this table.
